Why Attend This Conference?

Trauma is a near universal experience of individuals with behavioral health problems. According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Office on Women's Health, 55% – 99% of women in substance use treatment and 85% – 95% of women in the public mental health system report a history of trauma, with the abuse most commonly having occurred in childhood. Yet, most in the industry still struggle to understand the impacts of trauma on brain development in a concrete and tangible way. This conference will provide concrete strategies that operationalize what brain science tells us will be most effective. If you want to know more about how trauma impacts the brain and what to do about it, please join us for this exciting conference.
