It's true. Scientists have discovered that the more quality time you spend with your kids, the mentally and physically healthier they'll be. Just like regular check-ups or shots, you have the power to help keep your kids well today—and into adulthood. And it can be as easy as reading to them, playing with them, or simply snuggling.

Ask your doctor about the many wonderful ways you can help keep your child—and yourself—happier and healthier. aap.org/theresilienceproject
