Why Attend This Conference?

Health care policymakers and practitioners across the country increasingly recognize the destructive effects of trauma on the health status of children and adults. Experts in health care agree that adopting trauma-informed approaches to care can potentially improve patient engagement, enhance outcomes, and reduce avoidable care and excess costs for the health care sector. Yet, most in the industry still struggle to understand the impacts of trauma on brain development in a concrete and tangible way. This conference will provide concrete strategies that operationalize what brain science tells us will be most effective. If you want to know more about how trauma impacts the brain and what to do about it, please join us for this exciting conference.
